John Eyre and Mike Shaw were two keen English birders from Derbyshire who birded with me before two years ago and wanted to spend more time working the forest species of the area and seeing the famous birding sites like Fraser's Hill and Taman Negara. Each had about 30-odd targets and so a 15-day trip was arranged to try and see as many of the targets as possible.

Day One started with an early morning drive from Singapore to Pantí Bird Sanctuary, 60 km away in Johor State, and our site for the next four days. We were greeted on arrival at Pantí with a fly-past by a pair of Wreathed Hornbills and the haunting hoops of White-handed Gibbons. We drove as far as the 8-km stream and turned back when it got quiet. Other highlights from the morning included Checker-throated Woodpecker, a male Diard's Trogon, Chestnut-bellied Malkoha, a white male Asian Paradise-flycatcher with a long tail and several bulbuls.

We took a break at midday and returned to the forest for another three hours of birding but it was a lot quieter than the morning. We finished at 6.00 pm.

We spent the next four days here and saw many wonderful birds including many of the target species despite the generally dry weather conditions.

Day Two saw us make an early start and we were inside the trail by 5.50 am. No owls or frogmouths were detected. We also did not see Malaysian Eared Nightjar, a target bird, but we saw some Large-tailed Nightjars and a nervous Red-wattled Lapwing at the 8 km clearing. It was also near this spot that we saw a tall fruiting strangling fig with loads of birds on it. Leafbirds, fairy-bluebirds, pigeons, barbets and bulbuls made for a good morning and a sore neck. Focusing our efforts on the area between the 5 and 7 km streams, we heard a calling Rail Babbler late in the morning but failed to secure a sighting. The afternoon was quiet as expected but we stayed past dusk and managed to see one Malaysian Eared Nightjar well.

Day Three started later for us but we still heard Malaysian Eared Nightjar as we drove in at 6.50 am. Overall it was a good day as we added a male Jambu Fruit Dove, Indian Cuckoo, a roosting Buffy Fish Owl, Oriental Dwarf and Rufous-collared Kingfishers, Crimson-winged and Buff-rumped Woodpeckers, Black-capped Babbler, Pale Blue Flycatcher, White-crowned Forktail, and Ruby-cheeked and Plain Sunbirds.

Day Four was our last full day at Pantí and we were in by 7.00 am. We stayed till 12.30 pm but did not add much to our list. Birds of interest included the black-backed form of the Oriental Dwarf Kingfisher, two male Asian Paradise-flycatchers, Green Iora and a male Yellow-rumped Flycatcher. A late afternoon excursion did not deliver any new birds.

Day Five started the same time as the previous day. We had better luck with big birds and we saw Maroon Woodpecker, and Black and Bushy-crested Hornbills, as well as smaller birds like Siberian Blue Robin and Grey-cheeked Bulbul. We also heard a Rail Babbler but it disappeared without showing. At noon, we said goodbye to Pantí and drove to a golf resort where we had lunch and also good looks at two Barred Eagle Owls.

The drive up to our next spot, Fraser's Hill, took longer than expected but we managed to haul ourselves into our hotel by 9.30 pm. We had dinner in the hotel restaurant and called it a day.

It is always good to start birding in a new place and so we got up early on Day Six, eager to sample montane birding but the misty conditions outside made us wait till past 7.00 am. We spent the whole day exploring Fraser's Hill, stopping only for lunch. Highlights included Black Eagle, Mountain Imperial Pigeon, Green-billed Malkoha, Red-headed Trogon, Fire-tufted and Black-browed Barbets, Long-tailed Broadbill, Streaked Wren-babbler, Lesser Shortwing, White-tailed Robin and the endemic Malayan Whistling-thrush. Of course, one cannot bird Fraser's Hill without coming across the bold and ubiquitous Long-tailed Sibia, Chestnut-capped Laughingthrush, Mountain Fulvetta, Streaked Spiderhunter and Black-throated Sunbird. We ended our first day at Fraser's Hill with 50 species, most of which were montane species not present in Pantí.

Day Seven was another full day at Fraser's Hill. We covered more or less every spot on the hill except the Waterfall Road. We added Sunda Cuckoo, Lesser Yellowthroat, Blyth's and Black-eared Shrike-babblers, Mountain Bulbul, Rufous-bellied Swallow, Mountain Leaf Warbler, Chestnut-crowned Warbler, Grey-throated Babbler, Blue Nuthatch and Verditer Flycatcher. We ended the day on 48 species.

Day Eight saw us take the road down to the Gap for some early morning birding. It proved a wise decision as we were tackling the hill birds now. We heard Rhinoceros and Helmeted Hornbills but did not see them. Birds of interest at the Gap included Red Junglefowl, Thick-billed Green Pigeon, Orange-breasted Trogon, Checker-throated and Crimson-winged Woodpeckers, Large Woodshrike, Bronzed Drongo, Sultan Tit, Ochraceous Bulbul, Black Laughingthrush, Hill Blue Flycatcher and Blue Whistling Thrush.

Up at Fraser's Hill, we had a quick lunch and continued birding in the area around Telecoms Loop and the loop around the golf course. It was generally quiet but we added Greater Yellownape and Asian House Martin to achieve a day tally of 73 species.

Day Nine saw us spending our last morning at Fraser's Hill down at Bishop's Trail. We were trying for Rusty-naped Pitta which we had heard on our first day but it refused to show. We did however add to our growing wren-babbler list, with Streaked, Eyebrowed and Pygmy, all appearing while we were waiting for the pitta. At 11.30 am, we checked out of our hotel and drove to our next spot, Bukit Tinggi.

We arrived at 2.30 pm and dropped by the Botanical Garden for a quick look. We were birding at around 1,000 m asl, so we saw a mix of lowland and montane species. We saw four Crested Honey Buzzards on migration, Blue-eared Barbet, a friendly pair of Silver-breasted Broadbills and Hill Blue Flycatcher. We also managed to secure a brief look at two Mountain Peacock-pheasants at a stakeout. Unfortunately, Mike was obscured and he missed it. We would have to try again the next day.

Day Ten saw us up and early at the Botanical Garden. We were joined by two Australian birders, Ron and Sue Johns. It didn't take us long for the peacock-pheasants to appear. This time, we had four birds foraging in plain view. Not wanting to disturb them unduly, we left soon after and still had time for a proper breakfast at our hotel. At 10.00 am, we left Bukit Tinggi and we arrived at Kuala Tahan in three hours. Once our rooms were settled, we started birding at 4.30 pm and learned that, like Pant, Taman Negara was experiencing a period of prolonged dry weather. This sounded ominous. We explored the Tahan Trail, the area around headquarters and Tahan Hide in the remaining hours of daylight. After dinner, we explored the Tahan Trail for night birds. It was silent but we were lucky enough to flush an Oriental bay Owl in the process. Pity no one had a camera then!

Day Eleven was our first full day at Taman Negara. We decided to try the world famous Canopy Walk even though we knew it would be crowded. We did well seeing the much desired Cinnamon-rumped Trogon, Black-and-yellow Broadbill and the uncommon Scaly-crowned Babbler along the way. After lunch and siesta, we explored the Tahan Trail, all the way to the first bridge past Lubon Simpon. Highlights of our first full day at Taman Negara included Large Green Pigeon, Green Imperial Pigeon, Orange-backed Woodpecker, Blue-winged Pitta, Spotted Fantail, Grey-bellied Bulbul, and Tickell's and White-tailed Blue Flycatchers.

Days Twelve and Thirteen were also long hard days of birding in the majestic lowland forests of Taman Negara. Highlights included Crested Partridge, Crested Fireback, Red-naped and Cinnamon-rumped Trogons, White-crowned Hornbill, Blue-banded Kingfisher, Scaly-breasted Bulbul, Ferruginous Babbler, Rufous-chested Flycatcher, Malaysian Blue Flycatcher and Scarlet-breasted Flowerpecker.

Day Fourteen was our last morning at Taman Negara. We relaxed for the first time in two weeks, as we enjoyed our breakfast, checked out and said goodbye to this rainforest paradise. The rest of the day was spent on the road and we reached Singapore at 6.30 pm.

Day Fifteen was the day of the Singapore extension. We opted for a later start as we were feeling the strain of two weeks of continuous birding. It turned out well at our first spot – the Central Catchment Nature Reserve. We had lots of good birds including Grey-headed Fish Eagle, Lineated and Coppersmith Barbets, a perched male Blue-rumped Parrot, a surprise Straw-headed Bulbul, Short-tailed Babbler and van Hasselt's Sunbird.

After breakfast, we rushed down to the Singapore Botanic Gardens for two birds that were making news in Singapore birding circles. We were worried as it was very crowded when we got there but both Hooded Pitta and Siberian Blue Robin were seen easily as we joined the other photographers present. We didn't linger as we had other targets to go after.

Our next spot was Sungei Buloh Wetland Reserve. Our target was a female Von Schrenck's Bittern that had been there for weeks. However, we scanned the lily pond and it wasn't there! We decided to explore the other parts of the reserve, adding Whimbrel, Common Greenshank, Common Redshank and Common Sandpiper to our lists. An hour later, we returned and, sure enough, the bittern had re-emerged! Mission accomplished!

Lunch was next followed by a long drive to Pasir Ris Park. Our target was the resident Spotted Wood Owls and we found them easily. There was still time for a short hop over to Lorong Halus Wetland where we managed to add Black Baza, Chinese and Javan Pond Herons in partial summer plumages, Slaty-breasted Rail and White Wagtail.

I dropped John and Mike at the airport at 6.00 pm and bid goodbye. It had been a fun yet challenging fifteen days of birding. We recorded 294 species in all, with 259 from Malaysia and 79 from Singapore. Many target birds were seen although, inevitably, there were a few misses. Overall, it was a highly enjoyable birding adventure with good birds, good food and good company.
